I. ASSIGNMENT AND BACKGROUND

Since 1975, Blendtec has manufactured and sold both consumer and professional grade blenders along with blender related accessories.¹ Among these accessories is the Blendtec GO which is a travel bottle that offers a single-serve blend-in-cup function for use with Blendtec blenders. In 1999, Blendtec applied to register the BLENDTEC trademark. In 2010, Blendtec applied to register its "Swirl" logo as a trademark.² The United States Patent and Trademark Office issued registrations for both the BLENDTEC and Swirl trademarks.

During the period of Blendjet's alleged infringement, Blendtec has sold its products in brick and mortar retail stores and through online retailers. Blendtec also sells its blenders online via its own website (www.blendtec.com).³

In 2017, Blendjet began selling blenders under the Blendjet name with a similar "swirl" logo design. During the period of Blendjet's alleged infringement, Blendjet has sold its blenders at some of the same stores as Blendtec.

I have been retained to assess the level of confusion, if any, that exists between Blendtec and Blendjet brands, using standard and accepted statistical and consumer market survey methods.

¹ Amended complaint filed by Blendtec Inc. on November 12, 2021.

II. STUDY AUTHORSHIP AND QUALIFICATIONS

This study was designed, supervised, and implemented under my supervision.

I am currently a law professor at Arizona State University, with an appointment in the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law. I am also the Executive Director of the McCarthy Institute at ASU Law, which is focused on scholarship and research in intellectual property law, with particular emphasis in the areas of trademark law, branding and consumer perceptions related to brands. I have published extensively on issues relating to intellectual property law and am editor-in-chief and co-author of McCarthy's Desk Encyclopedia of Intellectual Property Law.

Formerly, between 2018 and 2021, I held a joint appointment in both the law school and Ageno School of Business at Golden Gate University in San Francisco. Between 2000 and 2018, I was a law professor and Executive Director of the McCarthy Institute for Intellectual Property and Technology Law at the University of San Francisco and Director of the Center for the Empirical Study of Trademark Law (CEST).

I have consulted and/or qualified as an expert witness on behalf of clients in numerous cases involving consumer perception and behavior issues, including in matters in the United States (federal and state courts), Asia, the European Union, the Middle East, and South America. I have personally designed and executed numerous consumer perception surveys that have been accepted into evidence by state and federal courts.

In addition to my survey research experience, I hold a J.D. from University of Michigan Law School. Additional biographical material, including lists of testimony and publications, is provided in Appendix A.

For my engagement in this matter, I am being compensated at my standard rate. My compensation is not dependent upon the outcome of this proceeding.

III. SUMMARY OF SURVEY

To assess consumer perceptions relevant to the likelihood of confusion in this case, I utilized a one-room Squirt-style survey design.

After reviewing the results of several on-line searches, both on Google.com and searches within the websites for major retailers, as well as additional information in the marketplace provided by the parties in this litigation, I concluded that consumers could encounter these brands in digital and/or temporal proximity, including but not limited to:

- Consumers can encounter both brands on a single Google search results page when searching, for example, for "blenders," "smoothie blenders," "target blenders," or "walmart blenders." 5
- Consumers can encounter both brands at issue when searching for blenders on the websites of several major retailers, such as Kohl's, Wal-Mart, Best Buy, Target, and Bed Bath and Beyond.⁶

⁵ See Appendix F.

Consumers can encounter both brands at issue when looking for blenders in physical store locations.⁷

In addition to the digital and temporal proximity described above, there is evidence of traditional in-store proximity. In the period from January 2020 to December 2022, both Blendtec and Blendjet blenders were sold in overlapping physical stores such as Bed, Bath, and Beyond, Target, Best Buy, Kroger, and HomeGoods.8

Given this evidence of proximity, the Squirt survey style is appropriate to assess consumer confusion.

I conducted a survey comprising four cells of respondents. In cell 1 and cell 2, respondents were shown images of blenders isolated against white backgrounds. In cells 3 and 4, respondents were shown images of manufacturers' websites selling the same blenders as depicted in the first survey. Respondents were randomly assigned to one of the four cells.

In the control cell with images of the products (cell 2), the image of Defendant's Blendjet product as depicted in the corresponding test cell (cell 1) was altered to remove the Blendjet mark and swirl logo, replaced with "Pomo," a made-up name (see Figures 1a and 1b below).

Similarly, in the control cell with images of the websites (cell 4), the image of the website depicting the Blendjet product from the corresponding test cell (cell 3) was altered to display the made-up name "Pomo," and the Blendjet swirl logo was also removed (Figure 2b). Additionally, all other instances of the word "Blendtec" depicting in the website image were replaced with "Pomo."

Within the test cells, consumers saw the product or website image for a Blendtec blender, a Blendjet blender, and blenders from four other competitors. Respondents were initially shown each image separately and then all images together. Respondents were asked if they believed any of the products shown were from the same company or affiliated or connected in any way.

Within the control cells, everything was identical to the above, with the exception that the images of the Blendjet product and website were replaced with the altered images of the Blendjet product (the "Pomo" blender).

IV. SUMMARY OF OPINIONS

- 1. Among one-room Squirt-style confusion survey respondents who were shown images of blenders, 26.9% of respondents reported confusion between the Blendjet blender and Blendtec blender, after removal of control noise.
- 2. Among one-room Squirt-style confusion survey respondents who were shown images of manufacturers' websites for the same blenders, 14.0% of respondents reported confusion between Blendjet blender and Blendtec blender, after removal of control noise.
- 3. Overall, 20.5% of respondents reported confusion between Blendjet blender and Blendtec blender, after removal of control noise.
- 4. These confusion rates support a finding of likelihood of confusion between Defendant's Blendjet mark and Plaintiff's Blendtec mark.⁹

⁹ McCarthy on Trademarks and Unfair Competition § 32:326-327 (5th ed.) "Generally, figures in the range of 25 percent to 50 percent have been viewed as solid support for a finding of likelihood of confusion. The Ninth Circuit has said that a survey showing a 27.7% level of confusion is alone

V. SURVEY METHODOLOGY

Experimental Design

After passing screening criteria and qualifying for the survey, respondents were asked to review either six images of various blenders in isolation or six images of product pages for various blenders from the respective blender company website. The images were shown to each respondent in random order.

sufficient evidence to prevent a summary judgment that there is no likelihood of confusion....the Second Court found that a 15-20 percent rate corroborates a finding of likely confusion."

PageID.401

While these and subsequent images are reduced in size to fit on this page, the images appeared larger to consumers responding to the survey. Further, respondents were required to take this survey on a non-mobile device (i.e., a laptop, desktop, or tablet) and were told they could adjust the size of the image using standard browser zooming features. Respondents were also asked to state whether they could clearly see the images. Those indicating they could not see the images were terminated and not allowed to proceed further in the survey. Larger survey screenshots and the stimuli images are provided within Appendices C and D of this report.

Within the test cells, the six images shown were of blenders from Blendtec, Blendjet, Calphalon, Hamilton Beach, Tropeaka, and Wolf. In the control cells, the same lineup of brands was shown except the allegedly infringing Blendjet blender was replaced by the altered "Pomo" product. All other content and stimuli were identical across the test and control cells.

Respondents were first shown each image individually. To ensure proper review of the images, respondents had to view each image for a minimum of 5 seconds before continuing to the next screen of the survey.

After that, respondents were shown all of the images together on one screen. Respondents were then asked whether they believed each of the products is from a separate company, or if they believed that two or more are from the same company or are affiliated or connected in any way. The order of the first and second answer choices was randomized.

that each of these products is from a separate company, or do you think nore are from the same company or are affiliated or connected in any way t two or more products are from the same company or are affiliated/connected ch product is from a separate company
v or have no opinion
t

Respondents who indicated that they believed all of the products were from separate companies and were not affiliated or connected in any way were taken to the end of the survey.

Respondents who indicated that they believed two or more products were from the same company, or were affiliated or connected in any way were then asked to identify which two products they believed had this relationship. Then, those respondents were asked "why do you say that?"

Next, consumers who previously indicated that two or more products are from the same company were asked to select if they believed that any additional products shown in the images are from the same company or are affiliated or connected in any way.

Once again, respondents who indicated that they believed two or more additional products were from the same company or were affiliated or connected in any way were then asked to identify which two products they believed had this relationship. Then, those respondents were asked "why do you say that?" This line of questioning was repeated once more for individuals who answered affirmatively.

Relevant Universe of Interest

The relevant universe of this study was consumers who have purchased a blender within the past 12 months and/or who intend to purchase a blender in the next 12 months.

Respondents were first asked about their age.

What is your age?
○ Under 18
○ 18-24
O 25-35
○ 36-45
O 46-55
○ 56-65
○ 66+
O Prefer not to answer

Respondents who selected "Under 18" or "Prefer not to answer" were terminated from (i.e., not allowed to proceed further in) the survey.

Next, respondents were asked their gender. Options for "Female" and "Male" were randomized.

Respondents were then asked in which state they currently live and were provided with a drop-down menu of options.

Those selecting "I do not live in the United States" were terminated.

Respondents were then asked if they or anyone in their household work in certain industries. Options were randomized.

Respondents were terminated if they selected "For a supplier, retailer, vendor, or sales representative of kitchen appliances" "In market research," or "In advertising."

Respondents were then asked about their purchasing of various appliances in the last 12 months. Options were randomized.

Within the past 12 months, have you purchased any of the following types of products? Select all that apply.
Blenders
Microwaves
☐ Coffee makers
☐ Electric kettles
☐ Air fryers
☐ Cake mixers
□ None of the above

Next, respondents who selected "blenders" in the previous questions, were asked to identify whether they purchased the product in a physical store or from an online retailer.

In the prior question, you mentioned that you have purchased blenders within the last 12 months. Where have you purchased these products? Select all that apply
☐ In a physical store
From an online retailer
☐ None of the above

Next, respondents were asked whether they were likely to purchase those appliances in the next twelve months. As previously, the answer choices were randomized.

Within the next 12 months, are you likely to purchase any of the following types of products? Select all that apply.
Blenders
Microwaves
Coffee makers
☐ Electric kettles
☐ Air fryers
Cake mixers
None of the above

Respondents who selected "blenders" were then asked to identify whether they intended to purchase the product in a physical store or from an online retailer.

If a respondent selected "blenders" to either question (past or next 12 months), they were asked to identify what type of blender they had already, or were likely to, purchase.

In a prior question, you mentioned that you have purchased a blender in the past 12 months or are likely to purchase a blender in the next 12 months. Which type of blender best describes the blender(s) that you have purchased or are likely to purchase? Select all that apply.
Portable blender
Countertop blender
Other/not sure

In order to qualify for the survey, respondents had to select that they had purchased or planned to purchase a blender in the last or next 12 months. In total, I collected 847 qualified survey responses.

Rough quotas were also established to ensure approximately seventy percent of respondents had purchased, or were likely to purchase portable blenders. A total of 584 (68.9%) of qualified respondents were past and/or future purchasers of portable blenders.

Sampling Plan

The sample of survey respondents was recruited using a randomized selection of survey respondents who participate in online survey panels. Surveys conducted on the internet are well-accepted in both academic and market research, and are viewed by courts as standard and reliable methodological approaches to survey research. Online surveys are now the most common method of conducting market research among consumers. Companies and other entities regularly make decisions of importance based on data they collect through online surveys. Numerous U.S. District Courts have expressly endorsed and accepted into evidence online surveys in trademark cases.

Document 28-1

The sample of panelists used in the survey was provided by Dynata, a leading supplier of online samples for surveys. Dynata is highly regarded as a reputable source of consumers for online surveys within the field of market research. It utilizes appropriate industry procedures for ensuring the integrity and quality of their panels. It ensures data integrity through its continued review of its panelists' behavior on a variety of metrics.

This study was administered under "double-blind" conditions. Consumers were uninformed as to the purpose and sponsorship of the study. The survey is also, by definition, "blind" in that there is no person administering the surveys that can do anything to influence the results (unlike, for instance, a survey where someone asks a respondent questions in person or over the phone).

The online survey questionnaires were constructed, programmed, and hosted under my direction. My staff and I thoroughly tested the programmed surveys prior to any potential consumers receiving the invitation to participate in the survey.

Data was collected through the Qualtrics survey platform. The data sets showing each respondent's answers to all questions are provided in electronic form in Appendix E.

To ensure applicability of the research findings, rough quotas were set up in line with census distributions for age, gender, and region. Overall demographic information about respondents is shown in Table 2.

Interviewing Period

Interviewing was conducted July 14, 2023 through July 21, 2023.

Quality Control

Several quality control metrics were employed to ensure the validity of responses, including a series of quality control questions, software checks to prevent duplicate respondents, and manual review of the data to remove low-quality respondents.

First, respondents were required to complete a quality assurance question, and were required to enter "west" in the blank next to the "other" option.

Respondents who clicked any of the first five options were immediately terminated.

For quality assurance, please type the word "west" in the blank next to the "Other" box below and then click to continue.

O Strongly agree
○ Agree
O Neutral
○ Disagree
○ Strongly disagree
Other

This ensures that respondents are actively paying attention to the survey questions. Anyone who typed in a response other than "west" was terminated from the survey.

Additionally, respondents were asked to confirm that if they normally require glasses or contact lenses that they would wear them for the duration of the survey. Respondents who failed to confirm were terminated.

If you normally wear eye glasses or contact lenses, please confirm that you will be wearing them for the duration of this survey.
○ Confirmed
○ Not confirmed

Then, respondents were provided with a detailed list of instructions and were asked to agree to these instructions in order to participate in the survey.

You have qualified to take this survey. Before continuing, please carefully read these instructions:
* Please take the survey in one session without interruption. * Please keep your browser maximized for the entire survey. * While taking the survey, please do not consult any other websites or other electronic or written materials. * Please answer all questions on your own without consulting any other person. * Please do not guess. If you don't know for any question, please indicate so.
O I understand and agree to the above instructions
O I do not understand or do not agree to the above instructions

PageID.414

Respondents who indicated that they did not understand or agree to the instructions were terminated from the survey.

The survey was restricted from being taken on mobile devices to ensure clear viewing of the stimuli.

Finally, the dataset was reviewed in detail and "cleaned" prior to analysis. This includes "speeders" (those who took the survey in under 3 minutes) and consumers who entered nonsensical text into open-ended responses.¹⁰ A total of 14 respondents were removed for having nonsensical verbatim responses, representing 1.6% of the total dataset. Those removed responses are included in a separate tab in the dataset in Appendix E.

SURVEY RESULTS AND DISCUSSION VI.

As detailed in the Experimental Design section, consumers were randomly assigned to either the test or control cell of a survey, which either showed six images of blenders, or six images of webpages for the blenders from the respective maker's website.

After indicating that they could clearly see each image, respondents were shown all of the images together and then asked whether they believed any of the products were from the same company, or had an affiliation or connection of any kind.

Respondents in the test cell saw products from Blendtec, Blendjet, Calphalon, Hamilton Beach, Tropeaka, and Wolf. Respondents in the control cell saw the same products, except the Blendjet product was replaced with an altered version of Blendjet's product (the "Pomo" blender).

¹⁰ Responses were coded as nonsensical by two independent coders, and both independent coders agreed on every code for this dataset.

Among Cell 1 respondents, who were shown product images of the blenders including the Blendjet, 26.9% believed the Blendtec and Blendjet products were from the same company or were otherwise affiliated or connected. Among Cell 2 respondents, who were shown the Pomo blender in lieu of the Blendjet blender, 0% believed that the Blendtec and Pomo products were from the same company or were otherwise affiliated or connected. Therefore, the net confusion for the product image cells is 26.9% (26.9% - 0%)¹¹.

Among Cell 3 respondents, who were shown website images of the blenders including the Blendjet, 15.4% believed the Blendtec and Blendjet products were from the same company or were otherwise affiliated or connected. Among Cell 4 respondents, who were shown the website image of the Pomo blender in lieu of the Blendjet blender, 1.4% believed that the Blendtec and Pomo products were from the same company or were otherwise affiliated or connected. Therefore, the net confusion for the product image cells is 14.0% (15.4% - 1.4%)¹².

When combining the test cells, for both the product image and website image version of the survey, a gross percentage of 20.5% of the respondents believed that the Blendtec and Blendjet products shown were from the same company or otherwise affiliated or connected. Of the respondents in the control cells, for both the product image and website image cells, only 0.7% believed the Blendtec product came from the same company or was otherwise affiliated or connected with the Pomo product.

After controlling for noise, the net level of confusion between Blendtec and Blendjet, between both product image and website image cells, is $\underline{20.5\%}$ (21.2% - 0.7%).

Respondents who indicated a relationship between the brands were asked to provide a rationale (i.e., "Why do you say that?"). Below is a table of these verbatim responses. In my review, a significant percentage of respondents made the connection as a result of the word "blend", the similarity in the "brand" or "name," and the similarity of the swirl logo.

VII. CONCLUSION

After removal of control noise, the overall rate of confusion between Defendant's Blendjet blender and the Blendtec blender is 20.5%. This confusion rate supports a finding of likelihood of confusion between Defendant's Blendjet's name and swirl logo and Blendtec's registered marks.

Based on the research I describe in this report, it is my opinion that the Blendjet name and swirl logo in connection with the sale of blenders creates a significant level of consumer confusion with Blendtec among past and prospective purchasers of blenders.
